companies will likely end up paying for it, as developers are practically forced to use libGDX nowadays. Q: How to transfer files from a CD-R to another drive? I am working on a Debian system where I have installed GOG.com's Steam for Linux. I have burned a game CD for a game I purchased through GOG.com. Now I wish to play this game from the CD, but I can't, as I don't have the CD. So I'm trying to transfer the game files from the CD to my hard drive. However, I cannot do this. How can I transfer the game files from the CD to my hard drive? A: Just mount it with the mount command. If you have a folder where you keep all your cd's mount it as /media/cdrom. You can open the files with a text editor or simply just use the cd command (I'm not sure if cd is part of the base installation though, which I always prefer).
